WILL NOT HARASS BUSINESSES.

The federal trades commission, consisting of five members, has held a meeting with President Wilson and a program of action has been mapped out which the chairman characterized as a program of "constructive helpfulness." This commission was appointed under a federal act passed last fall and is given power that will have a far-reaching influence on the business life of the nation, more especially on business transacted by corporations. The act creating the commission supercedes the act of creating the bureau of corporations passed in 1903. This commission is given a vast amount of power with corporations doing an interstate business. It will have nothing to do with banks which are controlled by the federal reserve board and common carrier concerns are exempted from its influence as they are reserved for control by the interstate commerce commission.

The law creating this commission is designed to eliminate selfishness and unfairness from the relations of different business concerns. It has been proposed by the president himself in his Indianapolis speech that tariff experts work under this board to place such information before congress as it may need to pass fair tariff laws. Also it is proposed that trade experts be sent to foreign countries to look after market conditions. Each company now has its experts abroad building up markets, and it is the intention of this board to make these investigations and give the information gathered to American companies. Commercial men sent abroad under the old plans resulted chiefly in politicians being given these appointments and they have not been able to give corporations such information as they could depend upon. Consequently they have sent their own emissaries into the foreign markets.

It is the aim of this commission to use its power in directing corporations how to transact their business and avoid the violation of the anti-trust laws of the country, and the chairman states that he will make the commission do a service to the corporations of the country without harassing business.

PAT NAGLE.

Pat Nagle, the foremost socialist in Oklahoma, who has recently been giving some testimony before the United States industrial commission, in session at Dallas, Texas, is quite a character study. The writer has known him for nearly twenty years, but in the early history of Oklahoma Nagle would never have been thought of as a socialist. He was United States marshal of Oklahoma under President Cleveland. He is a brilliant lawyer and a man to whom nature and the world has been kind. Pat Nagle has always been well fed and was never seen illly clad. In general in his manner, not vain or puffed up, and is not a disappointed office seeker. In his young manhood he had many friends among influential people, had he chosen a different course he might have been a great corporation attorney or continued as a slick, well fed office holder. His early acquaintances have never been able to fathom the mystery of the strange course he has pursued. From his name you understand that he is of Irish descent, and an Irishman would rather be on the police force any time than to be a martyr. The socialists never charge an individual with anything wrong but lay all of the ills of society on the "system," yet the "system" can not be altogether responsible for the strange course that Nagle has chosen. He has no other n satisfied to follow the beaten paths. He is a natural iconoclast and probably if his life could be traced from his childhood we would learn that he had broken up other boys' playthings, and now he is following the same course, attempting to reform society by breaking up a lot of its playthings and destroying some of its idols. Men like Nagle, no matter what cause they may espouse, are not to be scoffed at. Nagle thinks while his compatriots rant. There are a lot of things that we meet with every day that are not right, and while his views are extreme, Nagle may call the attention of some constructive forces to evils that exist, and thus perform a service for society. Nagle's mistake is in his point of view, but he defends it forcefully and points out the errors intelligently, but, not unlike all other socialists, he does not offer a remedy. —McAlester News-Capital.

HOW EASY TO CATCH THEM!

In Houston there has existed and thrived a concern doing business under the firm style of the "German-American Doctors." Six so-called doctors, with palatial offices and an extensive office force, have vexed wealthy administering absent treatment—by mail—to easy people with "syndromes." A secret service agent of the government got busy, and, after many days spent on the train, secured indictments against the individual members of the enterprising concern.

The testimony introduced at the trial showed the system. Extensive and flowery advertising put them in touch with their patients—thousands of them, too.

Typewritten letters, exactly similar, were mailed to all, regardless of the answers they gave to the questions on the "diagnosis blank." These letters were appalling. The patients for the first time realized their critical physical condition. Treatment followed after the medical fees were remitted, of course.

A negro porter mixed the medicines. He must have been the physician-in-chief, for the testimony shows that his compound was sent to all. But they didn't call him doctor and he squealed when pinched, which was the weak spot in the scheme.

Beautifully simple, wasn't it? And so profitable! Sometimes the patients died and those couldn't talk. Sometimes they didn't and they spread the glorious news. Business was booming when the pernicious federal agent batted in.

Alas! Six "doctors," two stenographers and one bookkeeper were found guilty last week of using Uncle Sam's mails to defraud. The penalty is 20 years in the pen and $4,000 fine, if the federal judge wants to be real generous. It is to be hoped that he won't be niggardly about it. —Wichita Beacon.

In case Italy gets into the war against Germany and places its troops under the leadership of the French and English the act will go a long way toward inducing the Kaiser to sue for peace. If, however, Italy only seeks to recover that portion of Turkey occupied by its countrymen, Turkey may surrender that portion of its country and stop further activities. There is also a probability that Turkey will surrender Constantinople to Russia, and induce that country to cease hostilities. If that turn is taken and Russia lays down arms, Germany can dictate terms of peace and England and Russia will be at war against each other before a treaty of peace is ever signed in Europe.

The tennis bug is buzzing and the golf sticks are humming a welcome.

There is a chance just ahead to wear that new spring hat.

Chickasha has a country club. It bears the name of Sunnyside. But that does not mean it will have a dispensary copied after those once established in the state.

When the sun shone for a couple of days in February George Evans of the Chickasha Express exhausted his vocabulary in a description of the arrival of spring in Oklahoma. Now, when spring is really here, he hasn't a word to say.

Charles Francis Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, recently died at his winter home in Washington city. There is no occasion to remark concerning his death but it does seem strange that a man would make his winter home in Washington as long as southern Oklahoma is a part of the United States.

OBSERVATIONS

(By the Quiet Observer)

The legislature has come and gone. On the whole it has proven itself to be superior to its predecessors. Although the usual multiplicity of bills were introduced, the amount actually passed was small in comparison, and but very few were killed but what should have been killed. Students of the present code are compelled to admit that some repealing was necessary, but as the years roll on the separation of the chaff from the wheat to meet conditions will take place. There was of course some much needed legislation refused but the responsibility of that must lie where it belongs.

Governor Williams is meeting the most sanguine expectations of his friends and his political opponents so far have been denied the opportunity of "knocking" and incidentally I notice that the ranks of those same opponents are thinning considerably. Good. Our governor is entitled to the moral support of the people as a whole, so long as he pursues his consistent endeavors to serve the masses and that he will do, so we all believe.

Many of us who have watched the administration up to date deplore the impending impeachment trials. However, we all feel confident that the senate will do its full duty and if, as some of us believe, the "other side" of the story will reveal matters in an altogether different light, the principals will be entirely exonerated and a repetition of any such proceedings will be carefully guarded against and less frequent.

State Auditor E. B. Howard is fully manifesting the business policy of the people of the state in promoting its servants. His experience as member of the state board of affairs has placed him in a position to perform his present duties to the letter and spirit of the law. No warrant is issued except over his desk, and before he signs it, it must be backed up with specific legal authority. For four years he familiarized himself with the legal status of every appropriation, and if ten slightest shadow of a doubt exists in his mind he appeals to the attorney general. Keep your eye on that young Tulsa.

Which reminds me: Prince Freeling, attorney general, is "making good" in such a manner that he will be in the public eye for many years to come. His department is rising to the occasion in the present rate hearing, which at once stamps it with the seal of fitness to take care of the people's interests.

Lime Starvation
Causes Tuberculosis

The Medical Record (New York) of December 18, 1909, contains an article on "The Treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis, Based on the Assumption That the Direct Cause of the Disease is Lime Starvation," by Dr. John F. Russell, who says: "The condition which is recognized as preceding the active development of tuberculosis in the adult may be considered as due to lime starvation. Among inorganic substances lime salts appear to be of special physiological importance. . . . but if the salts are not in organic combination it is difficult to suppose that the cells can appropriate them for food."

Years of widespread use confirm us in the belief that the success of Eckman's Alternative in cases of pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption) and chronic throat and bronchial trouble is due in large measure to its content of lime, so combined with other ingredients as to be easily assimilated by the cells.

Don't miss this lime had much to do with the results obtained in many cases of these affections, which appear to have yielded to Eckman's Alternative.

As it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Young the active way order it for you or you can send direct. Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia.

action, and of the heartbreak of war, is "Dan" by Hal Reid. Its hero is a gray-haired darkey slave. At once servant and friend, often familiar in ways that would have been impermissible in one whose heart was not so true, he self-importantly imagines that the care and guardianship of the family—yes, and of the whole south, rests upon his stooping shoulders. There are sincere touches of mixed pathos and comedy in this; for he is often of great service to the family that owns and loves him, and in the end he gives his life to free his young master—he is shot at sunrise by Union soldiers.

The All Star Feature Corporation has filmed this story in 5 reels, with Lew Dockstader in the titular role, and has made an offering that deserves and will enjoy a good measure of popularity. It has been photographed in some place that passes perfectly for the woods and meadows of Virginia and has a fine old colonial dwelling in perfect repair fitting finely into the story as the big house of the Dabneys, owners of Dan, and staunch supporters of the southern cause.

The object of the picture is to give spectators a sense of the thrill of life with its tears and laughter. Its author shows his good sense in getting down to real business right away. We are introduced to Colonel Dabney (Hal Reid), and his darkey servant Dan (Lew Dockstader); then to Grace (Gail Kane), and Lila, her blind sister, (Lola Meredith), who is, with the possible exception of Hal Reid's Colonel Dabney, the most effectively pictured character in the whole cast. Miss Meredith is especially fortunate in emotional moments and adds tremendously to many of the picture's scenes. The scenes of love-making use up little space and are made interesting by the humorous interest that Dan takes in the general happiness. It is good, sincere work, and does the great comedian credit as a picture player. Raoul Dabney is played by George Cowl with intelligence and ease.

To the Housewife

Madam, if your husband is like most men, he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effective, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by all dealers.

A man who falls down stairs and doesn't break his neck thinks it is because he was so smart about the way he did it.
